This Regiment is not in a satisfactory state. The proportion of unqualified officers is very large, though no Corps in the Dominion has greater facilities for acquiring the requisite knowledge. The non-commissioned officers are fairly good, a few of them very good. The Regiment turned out weak for inspection, and for muster also. Remarks by the G. O. C. It is a question whether this Battalion is worth retaining. As a military organization it is of no value. IVOR HERBERT, Maj.-Gen.

Inspected by Maj.-Gen. Herbert, C.B., 6th, 7th and 8th July, 1892.	9th July, 1892.	Remarks of the G. O. C. I have last year expressed my satisfaction with the regimental system instituted by Lt.-Col. Domville I am glad to note an improvement in the horses and in drill, but the horses are not of the right stamp. In recognition of the superior standard of organization attained, I have given a silver trumpet to this regiment. This is likewise to mark a deficiency which requires amendment, viz., there is not an efficient trumpeter in the regiment. IVOR HERBERT, Maj.-Gen.

C.* The physique of this company is excellent, and the practical engineering work executed by it was quite remarkable. It labours under the serious disadvantage of being organized on a basis not adapted to the work it is required to perform. It is very necessary that its reorganization and proper equipment should be completed. IVOR HERBERT, Maj.-Gen.

(APPENDIX N.)

REPORT ON THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE OF CANADA.

FROM THE COMMANDANT ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE.

KINGSTON, 9th November, 1893.

To the General Officer Commanding the Militia,
President "ex officio" Royal Military College of Canada.

SIR,—In submitting my report on the Royal Military College of Canada, for the year ending 30th June, 1893, I have the honour to state that the progress made in studies has been satisfactory.

Estimating class progress by the average of marks gained,—the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd classes have shown marked improvement over the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd classes of the year 1891-92.

In the 4th Class, composed of recruits, there was a serious falling off, attributable to deficiency of average attainments on joining the College.

Subject to the remark that in consequence of the absence of one cadet of the 2nd Class, from the June, 1893, examination, the figures for that class and year have still to be increased—the return of average marks is as follows :

YEARS.	1st Class.	2nd Class.	3rd Class.	4th Class.
1892-93...	15·203	10·833	9·260	3·693
1891-92.....	15·042	9·955	7·593	4·510
Difference	+161	+878	+1·667	—817

Again, if the work of the whole four years' course of the graduating class of 1893 be compared with that of the graduating class of 1892 a similar satisfactory result is arrived at.

The class of 1892 was quite exceptional, inasmuch as amongst its fourteen members the marks of Mr. Dumble who stood third, had only twice been exceeded since the College was established ; the marks of Mr. Fraser who stood second had only once been exceeded ; while the marks of Mr. Vercoe exceeded, by 1,802, the highest score that has hitherto been obtained : yet the average of the whole class of 1893 is only $2\frac{1}{4}$ per cent less than that of 1892.

If the three exceptional graduates of 1892 be cast out of the account and two similarly exceptional graduates be struck off the 1893 list—the result will show that for the eleven remaining graduates in each class, the average score of those of 1893 exceed by 3·93 per cent the average score of those of 1892.

The bodily development of the members of the graduating class of 1893 affords renewed evidence of the beneficial physical effect of the food, clothing, housing, training and other influences affecting health during their residence here.

Exclusive of one graduate who on joining already weighed 180 lbs., the average increase of weight just prior to preparing for the final examination, was 18¼ lbs., and even in the exceptional case 4 lbs. were added to weight and 3¼ inches to chest measurement.

The average increase of chest measurement was all but 4 inches.

One gentleman added a fifth to his chest girth, over a quarter to his weight, and 4¼ inches to his stature.

In no case was there an absence of bodily improvement.

Appended to this report will be found a summary of the Professor's remarks upon the progress made in each class, and their mention of individual cadets meriting special notice.

Battn. Sergt.-Major B. Armstrong,
Co. Sergt.-Major C. B. de Boucherville,
Corporal G. Osborne,
Cadet Beer, and Cadet Evans

are exceptionally distinguished by having won marked praise, from every one of their Professors, in every subject of study.

Corporal Osborne has excelled all previous records in physics and chemistry, gaining 95 and 93 per cent of full marks in these subjects respectively.

I cannot omit from these remarks my warm recognition of the service rendered to the College by the brilliant achievements of Company Sergeant-Major de Boucherville, and expressing the obligation I feel personally to him for his admirable deportment in every respect during his cadetship.

I desire specially to note the indebtedness of the College to Battalion Sergt.-Major Armstrong who, as senior non-commissioned officer, has had exceptional and by no means always agreeable responsibility on his shoulders. He has acquitted himself in the most satisfactory manner.

The general prize list, the graduates pass and honour lists, and the names of graduates who have received commissions in Her Majesty's regular forces will be found following the summary of the Professor's remarks.

In June the Earl of Derby, who during His Excellency's term of office as Governor General of Canada, took a direct personal and warm interest in the Royal Military College, very graciously paid a farewell visit to the institution, and in congratulating the staff and cadets upon their connection with a school which had deservedly won a high reputation, was pleased to record his opinion that this College affords opportunities for preparation for civil and for military life not excelled by those of any British or Continental school.

The Honourable the Minister of Militia and Defence honoured the College by inspecting it at the close of the term, and expressed his satisfaction with the experience of the condition of the establishment he had gathered from the proceedings on the closing day.

Recently as the College has been established, and limited as is the accommodation it affords—turning out from ten to fifteen graduates a year—its students are to be found in the Church, practising law, medicine, agriculture and civil engineering, engaged in commerce, railway management., and in private and public companies, employed in postal departments, in ordnance factories, in the Dominion Customs Department, the Geological Department, the Marine and Fisheries Department, and serving in the Northwest Mounted Police force, in British Colonial employment, in the Canadian permanent militia, and in Her Majesty's regular forces.

A hurried analysis of the details has convinced me—as well as my personal experience here—that the Royal Military College of Canada is not being dealt with patriotically as a national institution.

I find that the Provincial Governments do almost absolutely nothing to foster their Military College.

I urge that this is neither patriotic nor prudent.

Canada is in quite an exceptional position from a military point of view, and it seems unreasonable in her case that not merely should the Federal Government of the day have often to defend the maintenance of the College, but that no assistance is rendered by the Provincial Governments in making it more attractive, as would be the case were they to deal with it as a national institution of which the graduates have as great a claim to their consideration by the Provincial Governments as they undoubtedly have on the Federal Government.

I think I may venture without risk of exaggeration to say of those who have passed through this school and have been fortunate in being taken by Government and other employers, that no class of young men has proved so reliable or contained so large a proportion of those who have rapidly risen to positions of responsibility and who have gained distinction.

The question that their educational attainments and character fit them for consideration does not admit of doubt.

That a duty rests on the Provincial Governments as well as on the Federal Government to do what is in their power to render the National Military College attractive appears equally unquestionable.

It has to be remembered that the military condition of Canada is such that it can give military employment to only a few of those qualifying at the College, consequently civil and military education has to be combined, in order to secure a reserve of trained officers ; and if graduates, failing to obtain Federal Government employment, are looked at askance by other employers because the school is styled military, it is evident that it must suffer also as a military school, from lack of candidates—a defect which can be met effectively only by general dissemination of the knowledge that its education for civil life is of a high order, and by the Governments—Federal and Provincial—co-operating in recognition of its essentially national character and claims.

Canada, as all countries, even those with the merest shadow of national pride and prudence, if there be such, requires to provide itself with military instruction to guard against both internal and external dangers. The slightest study of human nature must convince one of the folly of entertaining an opposite view.

In the absence of military organization involving, in the Canadian system, a reserve of trained officers—any marked success on the part of the Fenian raiders wonld have been followed within a few hours by such a rush of supporters, as would have seriously imperilled our national independence, and in any event the consequences would have been appalling.

Had the serious strain which was experienced in the more recent North-west rebellion, been too great for the military organization of the country to withstand—its blasting effect on Canadian nationality would have been incalculable.

But neither of these trials to Canada was of the immeasurably more serious kind, against which she has to be prepared.

Neither of them exceeded in violence the effort of a large band of discontented men.

In these considerations are surely to be found, not merely an excuse for maintaining a national military school, specially adapted to the requirements of Canada, but a justification, amounting to an individual and national duty to extend to it most liberal patriotic support and encouragement.

Nor would efficient support from the Provincial Governments entail appreciable inconvenience to them ; for, were each of them to offer one appointment annually to qualified graduates of the College, the desired result would be amply attained.

I beg earnestly to recommend that the Provincial Governments may be moved to give the subject their favourable consideration.

At the close of the year, two members of the staff, Major Mayne and Captain Van Straubenzie, R.E., left to rejoin their corps. They had done much to maintain the satisfactory condition of the College in all its aspects.

Major Mayne, a man whose versatility and ever active unselfish zeal, has deservedly won for him very many warm and valuable friendships in Canada, outside the College, will be much missed by his old pupils and fellows on the staff, who have had so happy an opportunity of associating with him for the last seven years.

Captain Van Straubenzie's influence on the cadets was of a kind which cannot fail to have lasting beneficial effects. Ready at all times to take part in their amusements, by unobtrusive example and gentle precept, he ever kept before them the pattern of a Christian gentleman, enjoying life, yet mindful of the reasonable limits within which those enjoyments should have play.

They are entitled to marked recognition of the efficiency with which they discharged their official duties on the College staff.

I have to express my indebtedness to the members of the College staff generally for the efficiency with which they have discharged their duties during the past year, and their zealous activity in promoting the interests of the school ; and I have to acknowledge the praiseworthy appreciation by the cadets of the opportunities afforded to them for acquiring a solid foundation for future pursuits in life.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your most obedient servant,

D. R. CAMERON,
Commandant,
Royal Military College.
