- On April 1, 2007, the CRA implemented the compliance refund hold legislation, which required it to delay paying rebates and refunds until all required returns have been filed. This legislation put an administrative burden on corporate entities in the municipalities, universities, schools and hospitals (MUSH), non-profit organizations (NPO), federal crown corporations, and Indian band sectors because they are exempt from federal income tax and many of these entities had not filed T2 returns in previous years.
