Medical Instructions

Everyone included in your application, whether accompanying you or not, must undergo a medical examination with a physician on the list of designated doctors. If you are a divorced or separated parent, a minor child of whom you have joint or sole custody is considered your dependent child, even if they usually live with the other parent and is not accompanying you to Canada.

Instructions for the medical examination will be provided after your application has been assessed by an Immigration Canada officer. You should not undergo a medical examination until you have been specifically instructed to do so.

You will be responsible for the costs of the medical examination for all of your family members.

At the time of the medical examination you and your family members will be required to present individual passports as evidence of identity. If your family members do not already have individual passports, you should apply to obtain them now.

The permanent resident visa has the same validity period as the medical results, that is, 12 months from the date of the first examination or test. Consequently, if you undergo a medical examination before other stages of processing are completed, this will limit the validity of your visa, and your visa could expire before you are ready to travel to Canada.
