Tips & Tricks

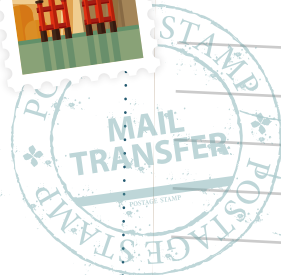

Start with yourself, and work back in time. Record your own details first. Then those of your parents and siblings.

Next, write down the details of your grandparents and all their children. Continue to work back, one generation at a time, based on the facts you have found.

Talk to your family members. Be like a special investigator. Gather names, places, events and important dates. Encourage your family to tell their stories. Record what you hear. Every new bit of information might be a clue to your family story!

Families come in all shapes and sizes. Be creative! Give this tree as many branches as you need, as unique as your own family.

Insert or draw your family picture here!

About Genealogy

Family history, or genealogy, is a wonderful way to better understand where we come from. Recording your family history may help you learn more about yourself. For some, this is an enjoyable hobby. For others, it is a passion!

You may use many tools for your research. Talk to your relatives. See government and church records. Look at newspapers and city directories.
