On December 11th, 1997 safety Officer Luc Sarrazin conducted an inquiry in the work place operated by Furcan Marine Limited. He noticed that employees at this work place were not wearing head protection where head injuries could occur. The safety officer issued a direction to the employer under subsection 145(1) of the Canada Labour Code, Part II (the Code) on December 11th, 1997.

On December 27th, 1997 the International Longshoremen's Association (I.L.A.) requested a review of the direction. A significant amount of time has elapsed in this case due to the fact that the I.L.A. had also presented a similar case before the Canada Industrial Relations Board (the Board). In that case, a safety officer issued a decision of no danger to employees refusing to wear hard hats. The I.L.A. requested that the Office of the Regional Safety Officer delay the hearing process in order for the Board to hear this case and render a decision. The I.L.A. argued that the outcome of the hearing before the Board would impact on the revision before the RSO and the need to proceed with the review of the direction. The Regional Safety Officer agreed with the postponement of a hearing date.

On August 18, 1999, the I.L.A. informed the Office of the Regional Safety Officer that following the decision of the Board, it was withdrawing its request for review. As the Regional Safety Officer responsible for the review of this direction I am confirming that the International Longshoremen's Association has withdrawn its request for review of the direction issued by Luc Sarrazin on December 10th, 1997 under subsection 145(1) of the Code. Issued on September 16, 1999.
