

Caught in the middle

This message is brought to you by the young people in the Gathering Youth Voices project.

Some parents think their children never listen.

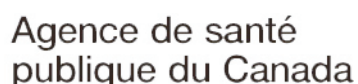

When it comes to family violence, especially between their parents, children are hearing and seeing all too much. In Canada, many children will witness violence in their homes this year. What's worse, even if it's not directed at them, children often blame themselves, feeling caught in the middle.

The impact can be worse than a slap in the face—children's emotional scars can last a lifetime. Those scars become visible in damaged health, school performance and social relationships. Children say it hurts, and they need adults to stop the violence.

Please find out more from the UN Secretary-General's Study on Violence Against Children www.unicef.ca/childprotection/violencestudy

For free copies of this poster contact the National Clearinghouse on Family Violence at www.phac-aspc.gc.ca/nc-cn or 1-800-267-1291

YOUTH ART: KELLY SMITH, SYDNEY NOVA SCOTIA

Canadian Council of Provincial Child and Youth Advocates