

CONNECTed supports the comments made by Save Your Skin Foundation that in fact PMPRB is not adopting a status quo approach when it advises that it "will not conduct a price review of any new patented medicines or open any investigations " until the new guidelines come into effect . PMPRB should have had new guidelines drafted already since the basket of countries has always been part of its process. All that changed is the countries included. Also we trust that stakeholders will be included in a consultation of the new guidelines prior to implementation.
