Introduction

The Public Service Commission of Canada is responsible for promoting and safeguarding a merit-based, representative and non-partisan public service that serves all Canadians.

The Staffing and Non-Partisanship Survey was introduced in 2018 as a biennial public service-wide survey.¹ Data collection took place over a period of 8 weeks — between February 22 and April 20, 2018. The survey targeted employees, hiring managers and staffing advisors to gather their views on a wide range of staffing-related topics, including the New Direction in Staffing, organizational staffing policies and practices, as well as political activities and non-partisanship.

Invitations to complete the survey were sent to 214 275 public servants across 74 departments and agencies subject to the Public Service Employment Act. A total of 101 892 employees completed the survey, representing an overall response rate of 47.6%. A complete list of participating departments and agencies with their respective response rates is found in Appendix A.

This report provides a summary of the survey's key results across federal public service departments and agencies that staff under the Public Service Employment Act.² Because the content of this survey is different from its predecessor (the Survey of Staffing), year-over-year comparisons are not always possible. More information on the survey is available on Statistics Canada's survey webpage.

In addition to this government-wide report, we are developing:

- organisation-specific reports
- an interactive web-based visualization tool allowing departments and agencies to explore the survey data and generate customized data tables
- a series of thematic reports on merit, fairness, and transparency, the New Direction in Staffing and non-partisanship

If you have any questions related to the content of this report, don't hesitate to contact us by email at: cfp.SDIP-SNPS.psc@canada.ca

¹ The Staffing and Non-Partisanship Survey was conducted by Statistics Canada on behalf of the Public Service Commission of Canada.

² While survey respondents from a variety of occupational groups indicated they were a staffing advisor, results to staffing advisor questions in this report are restricted to those from the PE group, as the intent of these questions was to solicit views of the HR community.

In-scope survey respondents

The results in this report are based on all full-time indeterminate and term employees. Part-time and seasonal employees, casuals, students, contractors, Governor-in-Council appointees and ministers' exempt staff are excluded from this analysis. Results also include members of the regular Canadian Armed Forces and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who conduct staffing activities under the Public Service Employment Act.

Reporting of results

The data presented in this report has been weighted to adjust for non-response and for respondents who did not want to share their data with the Public Service Commission of Canada. Therefore, the results can be generalized to the federal public service population in departments and agencies that are subject to the Public Service Employment Act.

Results are shown as percentages for 3 categories of responses:

1. "yes" or "no"
2. "strongly agree"; "somewhat agree"; neither agree nor disagree"; "somewhat disagree"; or "strongly disagree"
3. "not at all"; to a minimal extent"; "to a moderate extent"; or "to a great extent"

For all of the above, "don't know", "not applicable" and "unable to assess" responses are excluded.

Each major section of the report begins with highlights of the findings, followed by relevant tables. Within each table, positively phrased questions are presented first, followed by negatively phrased questions, where applicable.³

To protect the confidentiality of respondents, results are only provided for questions with at least 10 respondents. For ease of reference, the survey question numbers are reported in the tables. A copy of the survey questionnaire is available on Statistics Canada's website.

³ Negatively phrased questions are questions for which positive responses refer to negative outcomes. For example, a positive response to the statement "Within my organization, the administrative process involved in order to staff a position is burdensome," would represent a negative outcome.

Highlights

The following table provides a summary of the highlights presented in this report.

Managers who indicated that they have signed an Attestation Form (MAN_Q10B)	93.5%	6.5%

Perceptions of organizational staffing policies and practices

Highlights

Most managers feel staffing is burdensome and not quick enough

- Over 85% of managers indicated that the administrative process to staff positions in their department or agency is burdensome
 - And more than half (55.5%) indicated that this process is burdensome to a great extent
- Nearly 75% of managers indicated that they have a moderate or great understanding of their department or agency’s staffing policies
- While most managers (60.0%) felt that, to a moderate or great extent, staffing options within their department or agency provide them with flexibility in appointing persons who are a good fit within their work unit, only a minority of managers (37.6%) believed that these staffing options allow them to staff as quickly as required
 - One-quarter of managers indicated staffing options do not allow them to staff as quickly as required

Perceptions of staffing advice and support

Highlights

More than half of managers were satisfied with the services provided by staffing advisors

- Over 98% of staffing advisors were confident, to a moderate or great extent, in their ability to provide managers with useful staffing advice, while 72.7% of managers believed that the advice provided was useful
- Nearly 6 out of 10 managers (59.4%) indicated that, overall, they were satisfied with the staffing services they received from their department or agency
- According to staffing advisors, managers mainly sought their strategic input on:
 - the selection tools and methods to be used to assess candidates
 - establishing the merit criteria
 - the choice of staffing process
 - identifying the area of selection
- These are also the 4 areas where a vast majority of staffing advisors believed that, to a moderate or great extent, they had the most influence on managers' staffing actions

* Note: Negatively phrased question — only managers who indicated they disagreed that staffing advisors in their organization provided them with useful advice (MAN_Q65B) responded to this question.

Awareness and understanding of political activities and non-partisanship

Highlights – Political activities

While most employees report they understand their rights and obligations for engaging in political activities, they indicated that their departments and agencies need to keep them better informed.

- Nearly 98% of employees did not engage in political activities beyond voting or seeking candidacy
- A majority of employees (80.1%) reported a moderate or great awareness of their rights and obligations for engaging in political activities
- Less than two-thirds of employees (63.6%) indicated that, to a moderate or great extent, their department or agency keeps them informed of their right to engage in political activities
 - However, 88.5% of employees indicated that, to a moderate or great extent, they are able to make informed decisions about political engagement
- More than three-quarters of managers (76.6%) believed that, to a moderate or great extent, they could provide guidance and answers to their employees on engagement in political activities
